Supervision : Dr. Sylvain Brouard and Dr. Martial Foucault

Salary: 2,500 euros net/month

Education: Ph.D. in social sciences

Language : English (and French as a secondary language)

MAIN RESPONSIBILITIES

The Centre for Political Science Research of Sciences Po (CEVIPOF) based in Paris is recruiting for a postdoctoral position for a ANR research project “REPEAT: Representations, Perceptions and Attitudes under COVID-19: A comparative study”.

The project investigates representations, attitudes and reactions among the general public in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic in a number of countries exposed to the coronavirus. Scientific objectives are broadly summarized below:

1. To measure the dynamics of perceptions and (social) representations among different groups of people, based on stratified representative samples.
2. To explain the reasons why people are more or less likely to comply with public recommendations under certain circumstances (to be investigated by online survey and randomized experiments).
3. To address causal mechanisms by which people perceive the salience of how the virus disseminates differently and react to the discourse of public authorities and other public opinion leaders in their community accordingly.
4. To study the conditions under which the post-COVID-19 period is likely both to increase fragmentation within societies and to affect social cohesion. The survey will provide information on how citizens' expectations are shaped on the transformations and economic disorders they will have to deal with in the post COVID-19 era.
5. To investigate how people respond to the crisis in terms of economic well-being, tax implications, preferences on the role of the State, economic choices related to the national context and supranational environment (cooperation vs. self-interest).

The postdoc will work with REPEAT's principal investigators, Martial Foucault and Sylvain Brouard, political scientists, helping to 1- coordinate relationships with other scholars involved in the project (managing emails, workshops,...), 2- exploit data collection and 3- prepare research working papers with a special attention on comparative stuff. While the postdoc will be mainly involved in preparing data analysis, s/he will also be involved in the review of literature on political behaviours in times of (helath) crisis and, depending on his/her expertise and interests, may also be involved in other aspects of the project. Demonstrated experience of postgraduate research and publications is a prerequisite for this position, as are the ability to work with others and to organise and support joint research and events.

REQUIRED PROFILE

- Excellent writing skills in English and, if possible, also in French.
- PhD in Political Science or allied discipline, with a specialty in Political behaviour or political sociology.
- Good knowledge of public opinion literature.
- Strong skills in quantitative methods, experimental design.
- Interest in and, preferably, knowledge of debates in empirical political science about voter choice, political behaviours, and attitudes.
- Flexibility, the ability to work under pressure and to firm deadlines
- The ability to work at multiple tasks and with different groups of people.
- The ability to engage in primary and secondary research, and to author solo and joint publications.

SCIENCES PO - CEVIPOF

Created in 1960 and affiliated with the French National Scientific Research Centre (CNRS), the Centre for Political Science Research of Po (CEVIPOF) analyses major political trends and ideas which shape political forces and institutions, as well as the factors which influence the political behaviours and attitudes of our fellow citizens. CEVIPOF brings under its umbrella more than 80 researchers, teaching research staff, associated researchers and doctoral students. International and inter-disciplinary, it contributes through its empirical and theoretical work to the understanding of social and political change in France, in Europe and in great contemporary democracies.
