SPEAKERS and CHAIRS

Designation of chairs

Unless otherwise indicated – e.g. sessions organised with partner associations or Sciences Po's summer workshops - the chair of a parallel session is the final speaker programmed of the session.

Please feel free to change the order of presentation of papers should the final speaker have time constraints!

Preparing your talk

- Each conference room and amphitheatre is equipped with a standard audio-visual package setup that will allow you, if you want, to accompany your presentation with slides.
- Please be sure to prepare a .pdf file for your presentation so as to avoid eventual compatibility issues.
- Arrive at your session meeting room at least 5 minutes before the session begins to upload your pdf presentation. Take time to familiarise yourself with the set-up at the lectern.
- All presentations are in English

Timing

The chair is the time master :

- Each parallel session lasts 90 minutes. If the session includes 3 papers, we recommend 30 minutes be allotted to each paper (presentation + discussion); if the session includes 2 papers, it is up to you if you want to exceed the 30-minute rule of thumb !
- You might receive specific instructions from your session chair as to how your presentation is scheduled during your session, e.g. Sciences Po summer workshops.

A student has been affected to each floor of conference rooms and to each amphitheatre so as to ensure that things run smoothly – they will lend you a hand if you encounter any technical issues.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Christian GOLLIER (TSE) – Inaugural Lecture: June 14th

How Do We Express Our Responsibility to Future Generations? Discounting and Carbon Value

Abstract:

The energy transition will be costly, but it will reduce much larger climate damages in the future without it. In order to compare these immediate costs with their future benefits, one must estimate the “carbon value”, which is ideally equal to the discounted value of the flow of marginal climate damages. This raises the issue of the rate at which very distant climate damages should be discounted. I will explore the economic and moral issues behind our discounting systems in relation to our responsibilities towards future generations, and how they translate into a climate discount rate. I will be particularly interested in the role of the deep uncertainties surrounding the fate of our civilization on this Planet, the intensity of climate change, and the speed of green technological progress.

Christian Gollier’s keynote lecture is based on previously published works and a new working paper available here \(link\).

Christian Gollier is Professor of Economics and Director of the Toulouse School of Economics (TSE), which he founded with Jean Tirole in 2007.

His research spans the field of economics of uncertainty, environmental economics, finance, insurance, and cost benefit analysis, with a particular interest in long-term sustainable effects. He has published ten books on risk including The Economics of Risk and Time (MIT Press), winner of the Paul A. Samuelson Award (2001) and Pricing the Planet’s Future at Princeton University Press in 2012, which he presented at the 6th Arrow Lecture at Columbia University.

Christian Gollier is one of the authors of the 4th and 5th reports of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC, 2007 and 2013). In addition, he regularly advises governments on their public investment evaluation policies. He is also president of EAERE, the European Association of Environmental Economists.

His recent book Le Climat après la fin du mois (PUF 2019) stresses the importance of undertaking action in the face of climate change and has been very successful with the French general public.

Emmanuelle AURIOL (TSE, President of AFSE) – Presidential Address: June 15th

Women in Economics: Europe and the World

Abstract:

Based on a dataset that we collected from the top research institutions in economics around the globe (including universities, business schools, and other organizations, such as central banks), we document the underrepresentation of women in economics. For the 238 universities and business schools in the sample, women hold 25% of senior-level positions (full professor or associate professor) and 37% of junior-level positions. In the 82 US universities and business schools, the figures are 20% on the senior level and 32% on the entry level, while in the 122 European institutions, the numbers are 27% and 38%, respectively, with some heterogeneity across countries. The numbers also show that the highest-ranking institutions (in terms of research output) have fewer women in senior positions. Moreover, in the United States, this effect is even present on the junior level. The “leaky pipeline” may hence begin earlier than oftentimes assumed and is even more of an issue in the highly integrated market of the United States. In Europe, an institution ranked 100 places higher has 3 percentage points fewer women in senior positions, but in the United States, it is almost 5 percentage points.

Emmanuelle Auriol’s keynote lecture is based on her paper Underrepresentation of women in the economics profession more pronounced in the United States compared to heterogeneous Europe (joint with Guido Friebel, Alisa Weinberger, and Sascha Wilhelm), available here \(link\).

Emmanuelle Auriol is Professor of Economics at the Toulouse School of Economics (TSE) and the President of the Association Française de Science Économique (AFSE).

She is a bronze medalist of the CNRS (2003), a member of the Institut Universitaire de France (junior 2003, senior 2016) and a Fellow of the European Economic Association (EEA), of the CEPR, of the European Union Development Network (EUDN), and of the CESifo. She is the editor of several scientific journals, and she regularly collaborates on research and training contracts with the French Development Agency and the World Bank. She is also a member of the Conseil d’Analyse Économique and the Cercle des Économistes.

Combining theoretical and empirical approaches, her research focuses on industrial organization and development economics. She studies market failures, whether they are caused by the rent-seeking behaviour of agents with market power, or by cognitive biases such as negative intrinsic motivations, retrograde religious beliefs, discriminatory social norms, especially against women. Her work draws on contributions from both neo-classical economics and behavioural economics.

AFSE AWARDS

2023 AFSE PhD Prize Award

The 2023 AFSE PhD prize has been awarded to Mathilde MUÑOZ for her PhD Dissertation entitled Essays on taxation and international worker mobility in Europe - research carried out at the École des hautes études en sciences sociales (EHESS) and the Paris School of Economics (PSE), under the supervision of Thomas Piketty and defended on June, 21st, 2022.

Mathilde MUÑOZ

Mathilde is currently a post-doctoral fellow at the James M. and Cathleen D. Stone Center on Wealth and Income Inequality at University of California at Berkeley (UC Berkeley). She will be joining the faculty of UC Berkeley in July 2023 as an Assistant Professor of Economics.

More about Mathilde Muñoz

Her PhD Dissertation focuses on the interaction between globalization and redistribution, by studying, with a special focus on Europe, how trade and migration flows respond to international differences in personal taxes and labor market regulations, and by estimating how those flows shape inequalities within and across countries.

2023 AFSE PhD Prize - Special mentions

The very high quality of the submitted theses also led the jury to award two special mentions to Lydia ASSOUD and Yohan RENARD.

Lydia's PhD dissertation entitled Essays on the Political Economy of Development of the Middle East was carried out at EHESS under the co-supervision of Thomas Piketty and Ekaterina Zhuravskaya.

Lydia is Assistant Professor of Economics at the London School of Economics, Department of International Development. In 2024, she will also become an Academy Scholar at the Harvard Academy for International and Area Studies.

Her research interests lie at the intersection of development economics, political economy and economic history, with a particular focus on the Middle East.

Yohan's PhD Dissertation entitled Improving Child Health in Sub-Saharan Africa; Three essays in Microeconometrics was carried out at the Université Paris-Dauphine under the supervision of Marta Menéndez and Elodie Djemai.

Yohan is currently a lecturer and researcher at the Université Paris Dauphine - PSL, and a member of the joint research unit LEDa (Université Paris Dauphine, CNRS, IRD) - DIAL.

His research covers topics in applied microeconomics at the intersection of health and development economics. It explores several issues such as access to healthcare, determinants of human capital formation, as well as the health and economic consequences of the construction of infrastructures.

2023 AFSE Edmond Malinvaud Prize

Every year the AFSE awards a Prize for the best paper published in an indexed EconLit, peer-reviewed journal in the past two years by a young economist affiliated to a French laboratory.

The jury* of the Malinvaud Prize 2023 is pleased to award:

Michele FIORETTI (Sciences Po)

for his paper entitled Caring or Pretending to Care? Social Impact, Firms' Objectives, and Welfare, published in 2022 in the Journal of Political Economy, Vol. 130, Issue 11, pp. 2898-2942

The jury wanted to shed light on the topic of firms' social responsibility for which only a limited amount of literature aiming at quantifying possible impacts is available. This paper has the merit of opening the black box of social impact to understand the welfare implications for concerned agents. In particular, results obtained by Michele highlight that consumers might have a limited role in explaining corporate prosocial expenses. Therefore, social impact implies a trade-off between the payoffs to the firm and its suppliers rather than between the payoffs to the firm and its consumers, suggesting new avenues of research, as most of the social responsibility literature focuses on consumer choices.

The jury especially appreciated the combination of techniques carried out by Michele: micro data analysis with large data sets, econometric methods, development of a new structural model to disentangle drivers of supply and demand. Throughout this single-author paper, Michele shows that he masters the toolkit of modern economists and uses it efficiently to shed light on a major topic.
