Sciences Po’s Paris School of International Affairs is looking for 2 Teaching Assistants for courses offered in the African Studies Concentration.

One position is to work with Prof Ian Hopwood's classes on Development Evaluation Politics and Practice and Politics and Practice of Child Rights in Africa.

Prof Ian Hopwood is a former UNICEF representative. He will teach his two classes on a 6-week format between March and April. Both classes are seminar courses (below 40) this is why we are looking for the same TA for both classes. The TA should mostly assist the professor on communication with students and with grading.

The TA position will follow Sciences Po’s rules and regulations on TA contracts.

Another position is to work with Prof. Wane El-Ghassim on African Management of Peace and Security.

Prof Wane El-Ghassim is the former Chief of Staff and Chief Advisor to the Chairperson of the African Union Commission. He will teach on 6-week format between January and March. This class is a lecture (70 students). The TA should mostly assist the professor on communication with students and with grading.

The TA position will follow Sciences Po’s rules and regulations on TA contracts.

For both positions, the requirements are:

Political Science, History, Sociology or Law PhD student (1st years are welcomed)

English: fluent

Starting Spring semester 2020

Gross hourly salary 65.10€ (x 16h)

The tasks will be the following:

- communication with the students (via mail or office hours);
- preparation of the class material – if necessary;
- and some other administrative issues – ex. entering the grades on the system during the semester, etc.
- papers and exams grading (paid extra - the rate depends on the nature of the examination)
