Welcome from academic convenor Antoaneta Dimitrova

Dear friends and colleagues

As current Convenor of the Standing Group on the European Union of the European Consortium for Political Science Research I would like to welcome you to the 9th Biennial Conference on the European Union. This conference takes place at an eventful and interesting time for the European Union, involved in Brexit negotiations that are testing its physical and symbolic boundaries. Scenarios for the future Union have been proposed in European Commission’s 2017 White Paper, to discuss the constitution and further steps and hope to signal a new period of active involvement by members and a democratic opening for those wishing to join the Steering Committee and support our work.

Speaking of active involvement, professor Virginie Graudon and her team at SciencesPo have provided the most important ingredients for a successful conference: leadership, commitment, hard work and organisational support. On behalf of the Steering Committee and all members of the ECPR Standing Group on the EU, I would like to thank the entire organising committee for their efforts to make this conference a reality.

I would also like to express our appreciation for the work of the conference’s Section Chairs for their input into the programme. In addition, we would like to thank the Journal of European Public Policy for sponsoring the public lecture during the conference. I look forward to three interesting, challenging and productive days in Paris and hope that the conference papers, roundtables and lectures will be even more attractive than the charms of this wonderful city.

Antoaneta Dimitrova
Convenor of the
SGEU Steering Committee
Professor in Comparative Governance, Faculty of Governance and Global Affairs, Leiden University

ECPR Standing Group on the European Union

ECPR’s Standing Group on the European Union (SGEU) is a biennial pan-European conference; summer schools; organising and sponsoring Workshops, Panels and Sessions at ECPR events, and any major political science conferences; maintenance of a mailing list, a news service and a website.

Primarily a group of political scientists, the SGEU also fosters collaboration across social science disciplines, including anthropology, economics, law, sociology, and social psychology, with a substantive focus on the European Union.

ECPR’s Standing Group on the European Union (SGEU) promotes co-ordination and collaboration among political scientists interested in the blooming area of research on the EU. The Standing Group, one of the most populous in the ECPR, enjoys wide recognition.
Euroscepticism and the Future of European Integration

This lecture by Catherine de Vries (University of Essex) is sponsored by the Journal of European Public Policy, and will be introduced by the journal’s co-editor, Berthold Rittberger.

The European Union is facing turbulent times. It is plagued by deep divisions over how to shape its future. Over half a century of integration has created a profound interconnectedness between the political, economic, and social fates of member states. At the same time, however, the fortunes of member states have started to diverge dramatically. As a result, the political fault lines are widening. Today, they crosscut the continent from North to South on the economy and austerity, and from East to West on migration and human rights. What are the effects of these developments on public opinion? By presenting a wealth of empirical evidence, this lecture provides an overview of the contours of public opinion. Moreover, it discusses how it matters for behaviour in elections and how it shapes possible reform of the European Union in the future.

Catherine de Vries is a Professor of Politics in the Department of Government at the University of Essex where she also serves as the Director of the Essex Centre for Experimental Social Sciences, and a Professor and Chair of Political Behaviour at the Free University Amsterdam. She is also an associate member of Nuffield College at the University of Oxford. Over the years, she has published extensively on the most important societal and political problems facing Europe today, such as the ramifications of the Eurozone crisis, the success or failure of extremist parties or political corruption. Her recent monograph Euroscepticism and the Future of European Integration with Oxford University Press provides a systematic account of public opinion towards Europe.

Since Aesop’s fable The Fox and the Lion, the idea that there is strength in numbers has been considered common sense. This is also a leitmotif in many discourses on European integration, notably in idea that the European states need to ‘speak with one voice’ in global settings, that some issues, such as the environment, are best dealt through cross-state cooperation to avoid a ‘tragedy of the commons’, or that de jure ‘unity in diversity’ is a positive sum game. EU scholars have long exposed a much more complex reality: Legally – Differentiated political integration is a historical fact: à la carte Schengen, euro opt-outs, multi-speed Europe after enlargement. Socioeconomically, disparities among member states and their populations remain high despite common policy frameworks, and anti-EU parties exploit the notion that only some Europeans benefit from integration processes.

Diplomatically – Member states sometimes sing different tunes just as in the Eurovision contest. We have observed in 2018 with the debate on the GAFA proposals and the US IT giants. Concomitantly, there has been resistance from EU subnational and/or civil society actors to EU agreements with third states with the CETA or with Turkey regarding migration. The question is thus how to best address external challenges given tensions and contradictions within the EU.

European Parliament Office in France

As an extension for France of the European Parliament Directorate General for Communication, the mission of our office is to raise awareness of the European Parliament (EP) and the EU generally, and to encourage citizens to vote in European parliamentary elections. We provide visibility to MEPs’ legislative work and we give citizens access to our institution through public events, bring stakeholders and the public together with their MEPs, academics and think-tanks. Our Press relations team organizes press briefings and keeps the media informed of news stories in the European Parliament. Our colleagues dedicated to youth activities work closely with teachers, educationalists and bodies involved in active citizenship to produce and distribute free and neutral resources about the EP.

Our public relations team develops links with target bodies, professionals, companies, NGOs and anyone else who has an interest in European affairs and the role of the EP.
Europe in Political Turmoil: Explaining Party Politics and Electoral Dynamics in European Welfare Democracies

Europe’s political landscapes are in turmoil, and new radical parties challenge the established political order. The process of European integration is more and more contested politically. This Roundtable, based on the recently published Oxford University Press volume European Democracies & Party Politics, locates Europe’s contemporary challenges within the longer economic and political trajectory of its ‘welfare democracies’. Based on analysis of structures of political competition and voter-party links in different European democracies, it presents a general understanding of the political and economic turmoil of recent decades. It also provides an analytical framework that links welfare states to party systems, combining recent contributions to the comparative political economy of welfare states, labour markets and societies, and insights from party and electoral politics.

The Roundtable describes three phenomena: First, concerning electoral politics, it identifies a certain homogenisation of European party systems, the emergence of a new combination of leftist socio-economic and rightist sociocultural positions in many parties, and the different electoral success of the radical left in the north of Europe and of the radical right in the south. Second, it underlines a confluence toward renewed welfare state support among parties and voters. Third, it shows how the Europeanisation of political dynamics, combined with incompatible growth models, has created pronounced European cleavages.

Philip Manow is Professor for Comparative Political Economy at the University of Bremen. He held positions at the University of Konstanz and Heidelberg and was senior researcher at the Max-Planck Institute for the Study of Societies. He is currently a fellow at the Institute for Advanced Studies (SOCIUM) at the University of Bremen. He has also worked at EUI in Florence, and at the Universities of Oxford, Essen-Duisburg and Zurich, where he led an Ambilum project on women’s political alignment.

Bruno Palier is CNRS Research Director, Sciences Po Centre for European Studies and Comparative Political Economy and co-director of Laboratory for Interdisciplinary Evaluation of Public Policies. He has published numerous articles and books, on welfare state transformation as well as on European social policies. Trained in social science, he has a PhD in political science and was the scientific coordinator of a European Network of excellence, Reconciling Work and Welfare. He is also a Member of the Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics Executive Council. His research focuses on welfare reforms in Europe. See page 4 for Catherine de Vries.

Brexit: Where Are We, and Where Are We Headed?

This Roundtable will consider the state of the Brexit process in terms of negotiations between the UK and the EU and within the UK itself. Panellists will speculate how this process might unfold, and with what consequences.

Catherine Barnard, Senior Fellow of The UK in a Changing Europe, is Professor of European Union Law and Jean Monnet Chair of EU Law at the University of Cambridge. Her research interests include European Union law, labour and discrimination law, and competition law.

Anand Menon, Director of The UK in a Changing Europe, is Professor of European Politics and Foreign Affairs, Kings College London. His research focuses on international organisations, theories of European integration, British and French politics and foreign policies, EU institutions, and EU foreign and security policies.

Tom Nuttall, Charlemagne columnist for The Economist, covers European politics and economics. Before that he worked as US west coast correspondent in Los Angeles for two years, and as an editor on the Europe desk. Before joining The Economist, Tom worked as an editor at the think-tank, European Council on Foreign Relations, and spent several years as a senior editor at Prospect magazine.

Ivan Rogers KCMB, is the Former Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom to the European Union (2013–2017).

ABOUT LIEPP

LIEPP: Sciences Po Laboratory for the Interdisciplinary Evaluation of Public Policies

LIEPP is a laboratory created in 2011 with financial support from the French National Research Agency (ANR) for the interdisciplinary study and evaluation of public policies. The project strives to combine the highest standards of excellence in research from specific disciplines and from LIEPP’s founding centres with a systematic implementation of an interdisciplinary approach to public policy evaluation. LIEPP facilitates the cross-fertilisation of approaches from different disciplines on the same policy issue by providing researchers, visiting scholars, policy-makers and other stakeholders a platform for collaboration.

LIEPP brings together more than 100 Sciences Po researchers from various disciplines. The laboratory is organised around the common issue of public policy evaluation, which transcends disciplinary boundaries, fostering dialogue between economists, sociologists and political scientists – sometimes also engaging lawyers and historians. This interdisciplinary perspective is reinforced by a network of thematic research groups coordinating several projects around major public policy issues: Evaluation of Democracy, Educational Policies, Socio-fiscal Policies, and Discriminations & Social Inequalities. Each research group is co-directed by researchers from different disciplinary backgrounds and encompasses several projects on the same topic to ensure a multidisciplinary approach to the evaluation of a policy, combining qualitative, quantitative and comparative assessments. LIEPP supports many other projects dealing with single issues such as research excellence policies, health policies, urban policies, penal policies, and projects on open source data analysis.

Engaged on expanding national and international reach, LIEPP mobilises a network of 80 external researchers from 50 different institutions of which 40 per cent are abroad, and develops numerous partnerships with public policy institutions in France and abroad. Pursuing fundamental research, it aims at positioning France as an international leader in evaluation research. LIEPP also aims at informing public debate by disseminating the results of its research.

LIEPP’s founding, 212 scientific events have been organised. Thanks to its Visiting Scholars Programme, LIEPP has already received 51 visiting professors, who have benefited from interdisciplinary discussions with LIEPP affiliates and have contributed to LIEPP’s publications series and research projects. LIEPP also provides training on methods for the evaluation of public policy through teaching, lectures and professional training as well as by supporting the work of PhD candidates. Each year LIEPP awards funding for doctoral thesis research and provides students with rich interdisciplinary academic support.

LIEPP has its own publication series: Working papers, Methodological discussion papers (for interdisciplinary dialogue), and Policy Briefs (quick account of the research done on a given topic for experts and institutional stakeholders). These series foster exchange and peer review before publication in academic journals and a large number of publications linked to LIEPP’s topics and activities have been produced by LIEPP research affiliates over a short time span. LIEPP is part of the programme Investissements d’Avenir (Labex ANR-0091, ANR-11-IDEX-0005-02).

INDEX OF NAMES
Sciences Po Centre for European Studies and Comparative Politics

Sciences Po is an institution of higher education and research in the humanities and social sciences. Its work in law, economics, history, political science and sociology is pursued through eleven research units and several crosscutting programmes.

Sciences Po’s research community includes over 220 members and 350 PhD candidates. Recognised internationally, these members’ work covers a wide range of topics including education, democracies, urban development, globalisation and public health.

One of Sciences Po’s key objectives is to make a significant contribution to methodological, epistemological and theoretical advances in the humanities and social sciences. Its mission is also to share the results of its research with the international research community, students, and more broadly, society as a whole.

Over the past five years, the QS World University Rankings have confirmed Sciences Po’s place amongst leading universities in the social sciences. Sciences Po is 4th in the world in Politics and International Relations, and 37th in Sociology.

At national level, Sciences Po affirms its position:

1st in Political Science & International Relations and Sociology
2nd in Law and History
3rd in Economics.

Founded in 2009 and headed by Florence Haegel since September 2016, Sciences Po’s Centre for European Studies and Comparative Politics (UMR 8239) is a multidisciplinary and comparative research unit within the department of political science and sociology.

It aims to develop research programs on the impact of European economic and sociological changes on politics and policies, including a special focus on the process of European integration. It also compares these transformations with those occurring in other parts of the world.

Its key research domains are grouped around four main overlapping research axes:

• the transformations of capitalism
• the state as a producer of public policies
• cities, borders and (im)mobilities
• tensions in representative democracy.

CEE is now home to more than 25 senior researchers (FNSP, CNRS, university professors), some 50 PhD candidates and recent PhD recipients and more than 30 research associates, from France and abroad. CEE also regularly hosts well-known guest researchers, postdocs and PhD candidates for periods ranging from one month to one year.

Openness to the international scientific community is one of CEE’s key qualities. Most of its research projects include an international and/or comparative dimension and their results are often published in international journals or translated into foreign languages. CEE’s researchers belong to networks that include multinational teams. CEE also maintains longstanding partnerships with research institutions abroad.

CEE’s research activity includes the organisation of scientific events and it is the springboard for numerous publications. CEE publishes a series of online working papers: Cahiers européens de Sciences Po.

Support of young researchers is a key CEE objective and its researchers are strongly involved in Sciences Po’s teaching programs at all levels including PSIA – School of International Affairs, Urban School and School of Public Affairs.
