

CALL FOR BLOGS
Students Blog @ the Chair
Your Space for a Sustainable Conversation

The European Chair for Sustainable Development and Climate Transition at Sciences Po is calling for entries for the Students Blog @ the Chair. Submissions from currently enrolled PSIA and EAP students are welcome.

The topic for this call is:

What Future for Global Public-Private Cooperation?

With the near future promising rising climate and environmental dangers, economic inequality and political turmoil, what would be your thoughts on the challenges, opportunities and limits of public-private cooperation and the involvement of global companies in tackling the multiple crisis? The Davos Economic Forum (aka Davos) is an example of a self-styled 'International Organization for Public-Private Cooperation.' Can such efforts be useful in advancing equity and sustainability? How so?

Deadline for submission: Monday, 27 September 2021 by 11:59 pm

The winning entries will be published on the Chair's Blog website

Email your submission along with your short bio to alejandra.guraiebelizalde@sciencespo.fr

Requirements

- Maximum word length: 900 words (not including references)
- Must be original work
- Use proper citation (APA or Chicago style)
- Language of submission is English
- Send submission as a MS Word document
- Provide a title to your entry
- Entry must be compatible with Sciences Po's values
- If selected for publishing you will need to sign Sciences Po's copyright form

Style tips

- Use short sentences and keep paragraphs short as well
- Use the active tense
- Avoid jargon
- Check your facts and provide source details
- Tone can be conversational (but professional)
- When you quote someone, use parenthesis and identify the source
- Start with an attention-grabbing introduction, and wrap up with a strong conclusion
- You can be as creative as you wish (for example, focus on a particular country or share anecdotes)

Blogging process

- Time permitting, we will provide feedback to a small number of entries
- Sciences Po community will be able to comment on your submission through Whaller (Sciences Po social media tool).

We look forward to reading your submission!
