

Advanced English: Class, Humour & Eccentricity - British Society and Popular Culture

Antoine Cerisier

Academic year 2022-2023 - Language Department - Spring semester.

This course is meant for students of the advanced C1 and C2 levels. Theme-based language classes aim at developing written and oral skills through the study of a specific topic.

Course Objectives

This is a 12-week course exploring British society and popular culture, intended to improve student understanding and use of English.

The course has two main objectives:

- Discussing crucial social, political & historical issues in Britain.
- Facilitating the critical analysis of selected works in various media (cinema, TV, music, literature).

Course Description

Britain has a distinct culture shaped by both tradition and modernity. That culture has been represented in various popular media: literature, music, cinema and more recently television series. This class will cover a number of issues running through British society: key historical eras (the Thatcher years, the Troubles in Northern Ireland), but also the political system, the secret service and – perhaps most importantly – class differences.

Together we will study how these issues are reflected in the British cultural output. We will discuss films like Sorry We Missed You by Ken Loach and Gosford Park by Robert Altman; television series such as Peaky Blinders and Derry Girls; songs by Arctic Monkeys and Pulp; and extracts from literature written by John Le Carré and George Orwell.

Classes will be devoted to student-led discussions of the material and the issues discussed. We will also have weekly student presentations, quizzes on British culture and writing exercises in class.

Organization

Activities will cover the four language skills:

- Speaking.

- Writing.
- Listening.
- Reading.

In-class discussion of course content will emphasise speaking (including student presentations), but also reading (articles, interviews, poems), writing (both critical and creative) and listening (including songs and extracts from series & films).
